Dear Dr. Travers,

We are sending under separate cover 15 copies of our application to the Food Additives Committee of the National Health and Medical Research Council, concerning the use of calcium sucrose phosphates as food additives. With these 15 copies, in separate folders, are also two copies of the main references cited in this application.

We have included in these folders copies and translations of all references other than long reviews, text books, complete proceedings of conferences or theses. It has not been possible to include one reference, 69, concerning the results of the first year of the N.S.W. clinical trial. This has been held up pending the return from sabbatical leave in January 1967 of one of the authors, Dr. G. Gregory. The main part of this reference including the statistical analysis has been completed and it is hoped to have this complete reference in your hands to add to the others by the end of January.

Rather than hold up the whole application and to give the members of your committee as much time to peruse it before your February meeting, we are forwarding the application at this time.

Yours faithfully,

A. Mackintosh.
