

Homeopathy came into my life over 20 years ago when I became extremely unwell with mastitis. I had tried all that allopathic medicine had to offer to no avail. I then discovered Homeopathy and was able to feed my son for over a year. I had a special needs son a few years later and again after trying him with allopathic medicine and therapies homeopathy had the greatest positive impact on my child. I am not anti main- stream medicine I use a combination & I feel we are very lucky to have these choices available to us in our Country.

I am also aware that if we are to lose these rights how archaic Australia will look to the World as it is readily available in so many countries and used by many GP's also.

I have gone on to study Homeopathy and am now a practicing homeopath. I have seen time and time again the wonderful positive effects it has on individuals and their overall health.

I believe that option 1 needs to be chosen. I have seen the benefits of Homeopathy and seen how much it has helped a wider community of people. Taking away such rights to practice as a homeopath, I believe is against the normal rights of free choice to choose.
