Re: Consultation: Options for the future regulation of 'low risk' products

To whom it may concern,

I would like to submit my opinion for the future of Homeopathic goods used in Australia.

I have been using Homeopathic remedies for myself and my children for the past 12 years and feel they have always given good results. As a parent I look for the safest way to treat my children effectively and with the lowest risk possible. Homeopathy products offer this assurance. Homeopathic products are non toxic and have no side effects.

Other products on the market used for treating the same symptoms do pose a threat as they have the potential for risk of overdose or side effects. For example, paracetamol and ibuprofen.

We need to learn from other countries, Sweden, India and the United Kingdom to name a few and look at their results of successful use of Homeopathy including eradicating disease. The research has been done, the evidence is clear that Homeopathy does indeed work, why is Australia choosing to ignore these proven results.

I strongly support OPTION 1. - Keep homeopathy regulated the way it is.

Therefore I oppose to Option 4.

I hope that Australians continue to get the freedom of choosing the health products that work for them.

Kind regards,
